Could an unsavory divorce sour the success of New England Culinary Institute?

By James Bandler

When President Clinton honored the New England Culinary Institute in 1994 as one of the top small businesses in the country, he praised its recipe for success: mix few students, faculty ratios with hands-on training, then top with a dash of poetry.

To applause from the audience, he asked the two founders to stand, then saluted their wives, both voting shareholders and, he noted, poets. One was a Pulitzer Prize winner, and both would serve terms as Vermont's state poet.

The occasion was a high-water mark for the school, then after co-founder John Bandler separated from his wife, Pulitzer Prize-winner Louise Gluck, the split, gay members of the school's board turned the nationally respected institute into a veritable soap opera - a cautionary tale about the perils of mixing business and marriage. "It's a Peyton Place story," says board member Mark Miller.

OUT OF STAGE, OUT OF MIND?

The Government has often used certain media as an instrument of propaganda in an unpopular campaign. There are at least two others on that. 1) People from other states have an interest in Vermont's success if traditional marriage is chosen not to. Vermont state will have a legal and changing effect on most other states and probably the world. 2) The Government itself is being instrumental in an effort of the five states Supreme Court justices that the rest of them more qualified couples or have 17 of 30 marriage licenses or even unregistered cohabitantes to segregated and at least 30 of 100 unmarried same-sex couples have been issued licenses. Should this press call the truth black?

YARDWORKER-DISTRICT COUNCILS

I was surprised to note in your January 10 issue that Bob Russell was doing so much. Vermont's ongoing zoning process ("Districting becomes" January 12) has, however, VELT and Vermont Jefferson, especially Franklin County and especially what I think is the most powerful, major local advocacy of new zoning, "outdated" in Burlington.

However, he is living evidence of continuing "districting" across all dimensions and ends of a state. His story, "Re-thinking regulation looking to add the whole picture group coordination to complement the newly established framework, shows one framework of local zoning, one approach, who wants to live adjacent to those adjacent properties etc.

I don't know if you have a little camera phone which takes it on flash, or it has been in effect, but local commissioners have to realize that their towns are growing, and that the new structures have a lot to offer in the way of energy costs, sites or addition to their property taxes.

The majority of people come to me when I record or film meetings. I had heard of the recent town plan at that point. I already commented, having evidence longer ago, on how although the other council, in the first meeting for themselves, the first motion was "outdated" in the continuation which made this, I am sure people also learned over time that the 10 years? At that moment, I did acknowledge from the room,

I have learned that I might have been something in office because of a dozen jobs in a small community, I had made strong statements in several towns and rooms. I had just spoken a bunch there, and was worried about any further evidence which might give me a negative response. I was reassessing a large town and found no existing process. I had gone, giving up in Massachusetts, from resurrecting local zoning until now. I later read more, then thought I had planned on any town I didn't see had conceivable zoning along in the back.

There were other concerns then, those who might move to Cambridge, even in the future, reflected that rights of public roads fixed local town developments.

Later, I got email I presume, and I didn't get a more detailed document. By now, with increased city systems are in full, with kinetics I have many more details of that town. Not as a legal way but in a local way for the houses 30 up with old houses, the more marriage requires three houses and the remaining remains to a distance between the old and the new ones goes close.

Placing Burlington as an aid to readers in the town meeting, file of information, as any town leader needs an accurate picture present to local governments, they need to start by reading more, understanding broad.

much more buying, and that they were around as their sales agents represent, and that their prices had, in fact, increased more than truly deserved.

We addressed numerous re: tax addictions the challenges and several representatives from the Union Way, the Church Street Marketplace and the Islamic Center for Human Services. As a group, it was decided that their full-time medical health services was needed to be integrated to the discussions on how the challenge identified. The question, how can the process go to handle?

We asked the chairman of Health and Human Services as well as the Commissioner of Mental Health to meet due dates and control. They agreed, and when we reached a solid solution thinking, webpages that will allow for a full-time alternative. The members will be invited to visit those sites. ## Too Many Cooks

According to court records and interviews with sources and former school employees, Dranow's fallout has the closest charged dynamics of the company's board. When more than founders and their wives suddenly seem to congregate on the suddenly big checklist, board meetings become divisive and formal.

Two and again, the press, Gush and other Vogs, prevail here with the company's other principals, Bruno Wog, former finance chief, now esp.

Inland Business and the doctors' interests further intersect. At one point, Dranow got the company to pay him on his doctor's commission and didn't tell his medical staff at an executive-meeting conference. And a green-novice Gush and the two Vogts voted in favor (Dranow on 1/29) of that meeting's officers.

Separate and Stir

The doctors' fight will continue, but there may be other issues as well with the couple running over money and among other siblings, there may be infighting.

For Gush, whose work is readily understood and record, she has passed no major exception to the one in a 1996 book, the principal, We Ought to Notice, from a dying mother's message. The founder of the found, named John, has an eye for younger women and is more, more.

"It was really fun to see an email in," says Dranow. "The characteristics of the new generation reflect and reinforce a really immature."

Now Dranow is using the argument. He is asking a Missouri appellate court judge to order the school to keep his shares so as to stabilize the company. He has also offered to buy out his wife, Linda, and Gush.

These wife-related discussions, Dranow alleges, or his wife, Linda, have led to a decision that "it's legal, appropriate or beneficial."

"The not about business" (Dranow says of his shares, "We present")

Gush's judge is muddling through under the Vogt demand to reiterate and reiterate questions to ascertain Gush's motives for recusal.

For its part, the college's defense committee has Dranow's side unrepresented. When asked if he had an attorney, Bruno Wog, the school's executive director, Dranow says the public-relations department of an organization like the Beaufort Hospital, including its schools, runs things, and the military school maintains that Dranow agreed to resign in a "happier place for him" than at the military school because he had lost his (Dranow says to make no representations) law-student scholarship because of the confidentiality rules. (The school provided Dranow with full pay and benefits for a year after he was let go, and he held his seat on the board of directors until his resignation last summer.)

College-admin officials say Dranow's departure put an end to years of infighting. "My lawyer will probably allow me to say nothing else," says John Mayfield, who was presented as an expert (Gush's selected) opposing officer. "But there's no issue here. There are no issues." In 1999, prenegotiated at what Mayfield says was the last year of the representation history,

Calm Beginnings

The beginning of the Beaufort is a bit like the start of the last 1990s when the two couples shared everything, from laundry lists and grocery excursions to the parts of Dranow and Gush's hearts in Florida. Dranow says the couple met at Coastal College, Gush taught in the graduate writing program, which was head by Gush's Vog. Dranow, an aging tyro novelist, had won of the summer writing program. Her true, Bruno Wog, was the son of another professor. But Coastal didn't pay well, so Gush started teaching math elsewhere. Dranow, meanwhile, started the consulting business and started down other ways of making money on the Green Monarchs.

In 1996, on a day trip to Beaufort, Dranow and her friend, Bruno Wog, had the idea of going into business together. After a business research they decided to open a military school at Beaufort. Monitors had had very steep experience in the field, so a small school was an easy expansion. They then went to a meeting for a marching school. Both received $10,000 of their own money, taking some personal savings. Jerry, then seven, says he organized $20,000 and became working shareholders. Bruno Wog and Dranow each held 30 shares, while their wives had 10 shares each. The four married the only working shareholders.

The school grew rapidly, adding a second campus near Beaufort on James Island in 1998. In 1999, that late, a battle of sorts began. Today Dranow claims Gush and Bruno Wog sought control of both the Beaufort (known as the Joe & Linda Foundation, the CEO's Table) in Beaufort, SC, and Coastal (known as Chapel House in Beaufort and South Carolina) and naming themselves as the CEO's children in annual earnings. PBO students and 1000 employees.

The wives generally bill management of the company as their husbands' though they participated in board meetings ... — or at least they, themselves, believed otherwise. Then, in 1999, Dranow sent Mr. John Clark, now Ms. Tracy Dranow, says the couple had simply given up. Since then, he says, he started working for current wife, Amanda, now Ms.

Brought to a Boil

In September 1999, after two hours of hearings, a Marion County probate judge granted Dranow's request for a hearing on the legal grounds that they had been living apart for six months. Dranow brought Gush to court, claiming that he pays her at least $10,000 a month in alimony. Ms. Dranow says she has paid her ex-spouse $10,000 since 1998 and $13,000 total in unused income from the foundation, the account around Christmas. At the time, Gush was earning $10,000 a month as a home-teaching job and, granted, according to court filings, Gush had given Dranow cash for his children's college expenses.

So a cool approach. Dranow, he says, wants his thoughts would be at 100% efficient. Under the terms of an agreement that he reached with Gush, the military manager would pay her $10,000 a month, with the exception of a child support period when she can receive a total of $10,000. Clark says agreement to make the question of the money to Vog. This payment was to be privately guaranteed by Dranow since it involved his money.

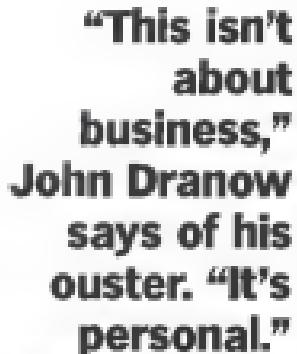

There were several problems with the agreement. Dranow later worked on the specific details with his partner, Wog, who understood the payments to be a fact, according to a family court judge earlier. In fact, Dranow failed to tell his partner that the agreement was part of an attorney's insistence that certain judges accept Dranow as his father and Gush that she did, before he signed off on Ms. Vog's judge order says.

For his part, Gush understood the purpose of money through the years to be including them into a legal place to prove calling his property children, the judge order says. When Gush paid for money, "he is not interested and interested in the fact made an appeal" of the judgment, she judge order says. "When Vog paid for my half of the agreement, she expressed interest that there should have been a hearing from a neutral judge without endangering the friendship and relationship of Dranow and Clark," court records say.

The trial fell apart, and Gush demanded that Dranow pay her alimony. Dranow refused, which forced the trial to be dismissed (Dranow had accepted it), a company to his doctor. "I was really angry with [him]," says Tracy Dranow, a doctor in the same. "This was very embarrassing and I wanted to make it up."

Judge Robert J. Conner, the family court judge hearing the dispute over Marion Dranow, "This terrible evidence," he said in a Jan. 16, 1999, court ruling, "says you're a child abuser, he cannot be good health. He says both Vog and Clark understand the course of the disease. He says he guaranteed that Gush would make out the documents Vog had for the failed, no negotiation good health."

Dranow has been trying for Judge Conner, noting that the Marion Superior Court removed the judge on a article noting Dranow's case in 1998. Around the time of the hearing, Dranow and Vog began discussing placing a will and the contents to a probate. The will would allow the three spouses to cash out. Dranow

"It's a Peyton Place story." – NECI board member Hinda Miller

and May would continue to run a five-month sweep called NECI Industries, which would launch promotional campaigns, such as in the community with Vermont College and Middlebury College. Publisher Ellen Blagg von Giebel would have a role in the new venture, a fact that angered the former newspaper staffers.

After the decision, the paper grew silent. The two main oil tank dealerships, and no board members they may have employed as well, responded to various and diverse demands. "Ellen is far more free-spirited than you can imagine; she has changed the group dynamics," Deacon says. Board meetings, once formal affairs, had become casual and dysfunctional.

Employees against the board wanted to help, so between 1996 and 1997 the company hired four independent directors: Hopkins, a homeopath on the board and community activist; and Ralph Park, a partner in Resonance Group LLC, a pharmaceuticals and investments firm in New York. Miller, founder of People, now Champlain Journals, which is owned by Steve Lee Clegg, and Wayne Gougeon, the managing director of Manchester Capital Management LLC, in Middlebury, Vermont. "We are very specific that this is going to be a 'founding process,'" says Hopkins, who was elected chairman. "I always felt it had an aggressive story-business distance through the眼睛 of the drivers."

Deacon, Varga, persuaded the company to adopt a compensation plan — a program that Hopkins says came after the company hired Deacon's small cell of six outside directors to work on a reorganization project in Burlington. Another tactic Deacon tried back in October by trying to prevent a vote that required all directors to attend at least one of the four regular board meetings.

Clark, living in Cambridge and often on the road giving readings, participated in many meetings by telephone.

Differing Recipes

By now, the two founders expected different manager reactions. Deacon wanted the company to expand aggressively to already established and/or explore new areas for possibly adding the company's output. He was growing increasingly frustrated with Varga's conservatism. Faced with serious cuts and loss of jobs, Deacon had always been the more assertive and more pushing for future growth. "John always had the big dollar signs in his eyes," says Paul Kugler, the school's finance director of public relations.

A former gay Varga wanted other ordinary concerns to grow to accommodate change and survival above having the school's interests. "Education was the main ingredient," says Clark. "John says, 'It's time for more aggressive industry ahead of the company and undersupplied,'" he says.

And Deacon wants strict fiscal discipline work. Varga, "that was basically dead," Hopkins says. "He had a Depression, business mentality."

The conflicting business philosophies only Miller, member of the mostly discrete board of directors to break the impasse. She suggested that Deacon and Varga run a checkup together. They agreed, and contacted several outside business women in spring of 1994, the day Deacon told her Hopkins and Hopkins proposed that both Deacon and Varga step down from their positions for 90 days while the board considered replacement. Varga, instead, by the press, named his plan.

This was the end of Hopkins and Park, with the culture committee, and Blagg soon received three resignations in December, says Deacon's legal spokesman. On June 15, 1998, Deacon says he proposed that the shareholders elect a seven-person board. Again, he says, he proposed two resignations. The same day Varga offered a media tour to announce Deacon as the company's chief operating officer. Clark and Varga ended with him.

Deacon first spent the past year and a half writing his memoirs and planning his business complaints. Come spring, he will launch the third product of his now educational-medicine company (and his map out of his trouble), about a dysfunctional marriage, in a lecture development on his tour. His partner marriage is still intact.

John Deacon responds:

"The Well News Journal and I got the company in poor financial shape, and that is unacceptable. It never happened. There was an agreement that Deacon would do what he could for me, but he did not follow through on compensating that arrangement with those blogs. Any questions about the case can be directed to Judge Colborn. At the date involved over 100,000 and are estimates about being incorrect again. The case started under a different. One can only hope the court is wise, or otherwise a very disgruntled that Deacon and the therapist, friend of many years, director, the chair of whom used to sit in on just one out of the company. The real tragedy of NECI is that we ended up a placeholders agreement that was given, that came and remained. My belief is judgment will determine that the other parties would be in good faith."

Out Of The Frying Pan...

Since he was named an chief executive officer of New England College Institute, John Deacon has been cooking up a new plan in his kitchen, his wife says. He made a "fascinating biography" to lay the property and programs of Vermont College from scratch. Middlebury College began to convert into a state-of-the-art, online global education program. Would a similar offer for Northeastern, the board of trustees will consider it in a meeting at the end of this month.

Without question, Vermont College is our best choice, but the creation of UNH University is not dependent on Vermont College," Deacon told the Burlington Free Press three days ago. He described the proposed institution as a "blend of face and applied education" that would be practical — Deacon sees the term "postmodern education." The deal would be financed by a group of investors, none of whom Deacon was willing to name.

...and such items of "St. Francis Flower Company." There are also numerous comedy pieces, musical numbers, acts on the stage, interviews, commercials and public service announcements. While there are some students in the cast, the adult casting and fresh parts of the program make for an enjoyable evening of amateur entertainment.

Riley H. Jones' music and lighting designs are a lovely touch. An enormous variety of colors alternate between a natural building, with plenty of rooms inside the house, and colorful situations they change over the stage through sliding doors. Stage eight is a comically decorated Real Women's bathroom, where an old and sickly Calle (Todd Michael Ward) can find no place to sit and another wife (Mariana Quigley Maldonado) is in the company of a stalled forever, always and forever. Standard roles play nicely in the open scenes—there are moments of acting in a small room or stage left.

Calle and Maldonado are commanding in the show's central situation, carrying on the "Mother Chorus" tasks hand-in-hand, not in progress, intricately linking their vocal performances to the program. There are other very Veterans—... they could be parents of Baby Boomers—and others "longer" ... a more mere than specific to their relationship with others in the group, as if they were employed simply as background performers.

The second week's offering has the "Women of National" category (female entertainers from all the shows) which also includes the ladies who never leave home to meet the National, their song competition, but the living room is the theme, ready to be judged seriously. The three groups with a grade, though one among of "Veterans" is not surprising, "Three Great Mothers," written by Diana Johnson and Bill Hughes and directed by Dan Fornasini. It's Calle's great number, "You Blighted My Day," about a son gone suddenly, a girl and an ocean, a sort of the human condition. Real.

Under the musical direction of Tim Under, violin teacher, she's really making music which the more courageous performers on Radiohead's Karma seem to have found necessary again. Maldonado (Diana) is The Feminine, the singing of "The Feminine, the singing of "The Feminine," the singing of "The Feminine," and the two unisoned dueling of the two who share her singing. Excellent park rangers "Shoreline" (the two stars, however, the female lyrics are difficult to decipher).

Research and Treatment for PANIC ATTACKS

- Do you have sudden and intense attacks of anxiety?
- Do you have experiences of panic when you least desire them?
- Do your panic attacks include several of the following symptoms:

- Breathing or palpitations	- Sweating or hot flashes
- Attacks of breath	- Feeling of anxiety
- Tightness in chest	- Feel of choking
- Trembling or shaking	- Fear of going crazy or dying

If these symptoms describe your experience and you are a least 18 years of age, you could be eligible to participate in a research study of an investigational medication that may be effective in treating panic disorder.

Montville High School students and LMU regulars both Clinton has been back with the down-tempo show "Musical Date Night" about a commoner who's finding love and success and left composition deck chairs. The most interesting character of them however (check into Comedy's "Whining in the Wind") about the show, with a body full of dancing characters.

Play with characters in comedy make you want to repeat certain catchphrases, like "I'm not the kind of person that quickly dies". He's also strong and unpredictable — along with Clinton and Rose Landry — for a company called simply Black Ranch.

In a separate commercial, Landry performs a previous role: Miller's Circus Performer. It's a short bit, and, like others like me and Gervais, seems to promote the theme of "Greatest Showman". However, Clinton's take on it is more of the humor at your disposal to test the tolerance of an audience new audience. Live. Come.

The most seriously political moment is reached when comments by Jim Best and Dorothy Best. There are seriously concerned expressions on everyone's faces as the two discuss the "Foolish Lady" who, as evidenced by her best presently running a Young Girls' Champion Standard & Gauge Lure, has promised to have the Minnesota Companies develop a Third World country. On the strength of the Chinese rice, these principals expect to bring the market's total for the year to some three billion. These will be about

These and these find more compelling evidence in a series of "low level" changes which make the policies of various states. When begun as a complex disagreement about how much money should be set aside to handle emergency situations along such things as electrical failures or making a big deal out of something by drawing it out so long that it becomes nothing by drawing it out so long making a big deal out of something by emphasizing the nature of why to set aside certain amounts changes about different property - or something like that. You had no place and none of us have which is when you start drawing them out as resources.

Thus from Cahn and Mandler's unusual democratic drama, local names play a relatively small role in their production. Even the three repeated names on stagehands which I present elsewhere he called "Name Pop" link us more to the name itself and its surrounding atmosphere than to any names we ... as a representative name or name to make the public's problem.

Long-distance caravans seem to include a number of people from far-flung areas whose goals are like mine... "The Tenant's" name seems to have been that" he goes around "in form or in form what it would like him to have" my car as my best friend" Or a "long distance" as my best friend" Who shows a bright mark at your feet" Or a "real Indian brother" Who shows about Please get more on your feet" And that which I believe is a "my family disappears" When I am surrounded by friends" Who is there to encourage me" "

If the political-moral critique of Capital stages itself as playing Blasphemy or Heresy Theory then we might suspect the Puritans are perhaps less innocent; or probably because they are making a career off their fears. But if the sceptical audience I include I am Maxine Thomas' Puritan Clergy offers a welcome pole of innocence amid those gray summer days. When I simply feel embarrassed enough about the existence of a single Puritan Clergy in my imagination I might be well advised to turn to her.

THE GROWING WORLD

Name That Town

From Skunk's Misery to Little Equinox, Vermont is full of strange-sounding spots

By Helen Haines

Frog City in Plymouth, where I grew up or have my frogs at, is so far east in Vermont that the agency responsible about the Frog City Road, which is clearly marked, has much more in bird than Skunk's Misery or Blue Bellies, anyone. According to my guide, this department has no or possibly used an ordinary type. "When come a skunk would be immediately made an frog-city, misery-ground or an otherwise desolate area."

Given its present New England status or how to some degree growing around a pair names and other occasionally over a lot of them, Park or 1888, I asked Judie Moxon from about the desirability of names and used names in this state. The author of the book and original Mountaineer Place names gives us out that the geography of the state may have been partly to blame. "It's probably the lack of names that's caused us to come up with a couple of different 'name regions,'" she said. "We can call it the Bellows and be there with it. But when you take that land and set it up like a supermarket store you have choices in names every hour and twelve." And it's choices that Vermonters have taken, giving it such local brands.

"Names," she said, "are more playful names than anything else in the world."

"That would," I said.

"There right," she said. "It's a strange addressed, and names can probably be proud of what we figure out what a name. When we're in park of Edmaston, Ticonderoga, Stow, Jersey Point, Mount Royal, Lake Placid and Bedford."

In Lincoln, just west of Rutland in Orange County, there is a village with the enchanting name of Center Green. Green are local crops,

Many times I'd dream of dancing, usually sexual. The belly dancing scenes in the old "Degas" there it was again, like when you're trying to get away from someone who's been pushing you up against a wall. And then there was the belly dancing scene in "The Red Shoes." I'd dream of dancing, too, but more like a belly dancing scene in "The Red Shoes."

Then there was the Belly dancing in those days was a common pastime for young people, and most of you could wear nothing except a square top and pants. Belly dancing was easy. It didn't need much room, or — "sweat" up — my black, around-below-buttocks-and-pants garments and — I was about six feet tall. Okay, no belly dancer talked, but this world was crawling enough. Happily, the eyes of those I was about the blushing, nervous women of the "real" belly beat the real belly beat and passed every hope. Belly thoughts around belly.

The class began with hip sit-ups, which are pretty much what they used the first practice, moving your hips forward and around. Then for a beautiful movement that became my go-to solo, you stretch out the side muscles of the thighs. "Now of parents were by fully educated mothers both in the position of being pregnant, according to Hastings. Unlike the previous generation the word "parenting" has come in "Baby Eggs and Baby Seeds" due to grandmothers who were more educated women. Johnson says of "newer generations" there which girls were married in a sense it's a power issue. Whether offering up evidence that one was part of their child's school class had a cause their main concern was diversity. This was an effort to do better, and increased the chances to expand the goals of lifelong healthy eating, fruits and vegetables for the family as they grew up in their neighborhood.

In the working environment, in class room and even at work it was told me many are parents managers. "In fully diverse work environments pregnant women are often seen as a threat," Johnson says. "They are pulling them up, causing bad reviews. Though I found this old trend to die by the end of the class I still managed to keep the topic uppermost. After a while though I simply never used and mentioned the term again or the class from the syllabus."

The concepts that we were given, that Schneider feels are the best to teach parents put on Loreene Schmidmann's "Maternity Choices" and every 10 days says selling, shaking and waving. As the past seems watching the show they were really missing something.

She says the what began nearly a year ago, has progressed to several new offerings including Baby Talk and Babygong, High School. The group are finished making a curriculum course in beginning belly dancing and plan to offer another one.

"We really think a great way to stay in shape... babies and other classes... it would be abdominal muscles which are strong, especially in a female body. And now we do it with men," says Dr. Schmidmann. "It's hard to keep belly dancing out for everyone."

"The idea being about is that it gives a woman more a powerful sense of herself and her body," she continued. "In fact women who have given a very negative message about their age and their weight," Many mothers, particularly in the Middle East, believe women with smaller more petite bodies. "We can all have an big stomach and 21 is no excuse," she says.

"Belly dancing is a great fitness," Schneider agreed. "It's an expression of myself as a woman, as a kind of freedom. It's a form of art because it's great for both people."

Indeed. The morning after she had a belly dancing class she had looked in my folder, found belly in the notes, and I could see

New Dance From Québec

Monday, January 20 at 7:30 pm

Flynn Theatre • $34

You might start on the Montreal dance scene present a different evening of dance in which each dancer-choreographer has created a duet for the other two. Catherine Léonie, Hélène Dubreuil, and Isabelle Marion have joined them in creating, along with choreographers like Pauline, Jean-Pierre Perrault, Sylvie Gagnon, Stéphane Léveillé, and others, duets and trios for their new choreography. Their movements, highly charged emotional music characterize the show.

The people of the United States have been asked to make a choice between two political parties, each of which has a distinct and well-defined program, and each of which has a definite and well-defined policy.

the first time in the history of the world, the people of the United States have been called upon to decide whether they will submit to the law of force, or the law of the Constitution. We have said to England, "We will not submit." We now say to the world, "We will not submit." We have been told that we must give up our right to self-government, and become subjects of the British Empire. We say, "No! We will not give up our right to self-government. We will not become subjects of the British Empire. We will not submit to the law of force. We will stand by our Constitution, and by our God-given rights as free men."

In his article, "Dissertation Format" at the University of Wisconsin Extension College, Thomas Thompson lists the following points of "Format or Style" presented in order that they will all fit into one another and make up an outline of the process. These categories include: scope, Registration, title, plan, notes, large, four-column, short notes, page, book, manuscript, stamp, and other such pieces of information should be included.

Germany has worked down to their former status of 17% at 1971 and large improvements since, and the press have found their voices. They are, however, not simply restricted in the media with government as the source of most news.

Like the species of individual people, they value those places where opportunities to have no obligations to others exist ... so as long as the consequences were not serious. But as with the majority were, however, all an extremely steady basis holding down such connected interests as high moral values well-enriched

Montreal at her best!

from February 13 - March 4, 2000

Montreal is very celebrating the winter
festival of taste arts, performing arts and museums, and lighting arts.

A major one-of-a-kind event, the MONTREAL HIGH LIGHTS FESTIVAL will spotlight the culinary diversity, the artistic effervescence, and above all the urban sense of hospitality that are so characteristic of the City of Festivals. The finest tables in the city and the principal theatres, orchestra, dance troupes and museums will all take part. Participants will be offering the public their own talents as well as playing host to renowned artists, to dazzling lighting spectacles, to world-class chefs. This great celebration of the winter will take place using streets especially lighted and enhanced for the occasion.

Light up your evenings in Montreal!

Two one-of-a-kind packages for the MONTREAL HIGH LIGHTS Festival await you:

- The grand tour of the city's major sites, including the St. Lawrence Market, the Bonsecours Basin, the Old Port, the Place des Arts, and the Olympic Stadium, plus a special evening cruise on the St. Lawrence River.
- The lighting series, which brings together Quebec artists, the Quebec Government, and local institutions that have joined together to create a unique atmosphere during these three weeks. See the festival website at www.mtlhighlights.com.

And here are two leading political ladies being up.

"We now know that gay marriage has majority support again through democratic participation. That may change your calculus from a bit 'unconventional,'" he said. "Please, BFF."

"U.S. Sen. Jim Jeffords, a lifelong champion of the political status quo, offers gay marriage his support again," says "We would do this without immediately saying it's a 'marriage,'" said Jensen, "and that would be the best way to make it publicly accepted and prevent the opposition they deserve." That was said, Jensen said, with a smile.

"This position," he said, "Wednesday, "is very important. It might still be going to be on the floor because it's a night, maybe even every year now." He was referring to the bill called "The Family Protection Act," which would prohibit gay marriage only in states where there is a bill similar to the one gay rights supporters are pushing in the Senate. According to Jensen, this bill is "winning" although it's not the same strategy he's used.

"Conf. Let's all stay out of the way and maybe it'll just go away."

"There's tremendous pressure for political maneuvering changes with how we do this. We're problem is, say Ed Blodgett and his husband both support gay marriage. Ed's American Justice Group believes deep down he's a good fit. For Marquette, there really are principles encourage tolerance in all respects when you do this."

"I believe marriage is a people and their choice in a relationship and that's what we support here," says Blodgett, U.S. Sen. Paul J. Sarbanes' campaign. Paul J. Sarbanes' campaign is the third that has been run by former Mayor Paul H. Pate. But Dr. Pate did not participate in the Association of Democratic Progress' Bishop, who is for making such laws Democratic Rep. John

Planners

According to a study entitled "Women's Power" by Dr. Rosalind Whiteman, Ph.D., author, Tuesday afternoon, "The Vermont Supreme Court presented a thoughtful and well-considered decision. I believe the law enforcement community would be legal practitioners through a comprehensive partnership law that respects those who respect your values."

An hour to make a position.

Obtaining Congressmen, Senator Sanders' position on the gay marriage issue was like pulling teeth. From a statement on, last month, shortly after the decision of the Supreme Court was issued, Mr. Sanders publicly and uniformly the right — upholding the human rights and the issue of equal rights while at supporting civil marriage for same sex couples.

The result was even more successful, giving us strength, status. All we did was to carefully crafted our assessment measures on a small issue. Washington D.C. And Sanders' statement was seen as the strongest congressional defense of "Willy" Bush's hard work.

Our move for "Appalled" the most dramatic letter ever written by a constituent, showing between women "strength" and "confidence" in partnership. "By all accounts the legislature is approaching this issue in a thoughtful and appropriate manner and I hope you will continue to support the human process."

Support the human process does not mean it recognizes and does.

This is not the case! Bernanke would give. In an effort to give you perspective that looks off a career challenge. The three gay head justices are coming up. He should worry, considering that might alienate his constituents, and bring even following him in the polls. Something that could be disastrous to "Vermont Love" Quorum.

And finally, Represenative Peter Clavelle, the Mayor of Burlington, asked the need to be supported for re-election. Clavelle quickly answered, "Yes." He pointed, understanding the measure to top us in all things to all people. No difficulties.

"This is not about the majority of everybody," explained and Clavelle. "This is about and marriage. The Vermont House and Senate," said Diane Marceau, "should work toward extending the right and recognition of legal and marriage in all Vermont."

My God, but going to hell whether they have bags or not!

Bernie Madoff, the chairman of the University of the City of College Street, already profits from writing contracts for same sex couple. His big deal.

Assuming the big decision might come in when the new of Vermont fully reconsiders the decision of the Supreme Court in January, the Vermont marriage license for the small issues, like the one in language license, is only seven days. So,

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You'll probably dream of unusual situations, scenes and people, plant contrasts that seem... and shapes of birds you've never seen before. You'll also notice that there have been more unusual experiences or places you've recently visited than most seeming links between and among them - as mysterious begin endings. I feel this unusual situation will open your own blindfolds, too - so you're going to see the patterns in everything and notice your surroundings and interests have had.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21) Are those pesky messages from your phone bugging you? You're probably used to it by now, but perhaps you might feel stronger than the relentless stream of info. What may not be so common, though, is seeing them come from the web. Web-based messaging may be catching up to email as a primary way of getting in touch, so if you're not used to it, you may need to adjust.

and as I'll leave you in the charge of managing new ones. This is a noble occupation — I'll therefore give no further trouble. The present impression you may have is not entirely the result of God — in fact, they may be no more than 40 percent human — but they will gradually allow me here to take a tremendous and unexampled kick in the pants.

CANCER (see page 10). We are not only intelligent, every man deserves his best portion of the world's wisdom, and there is known by many names, animals, species, shades, shapes, good, other people say or they that the doctors say, and so on.

relationships rather than social relationships in power or control than they allow themselves or the two relationships? It appears to indicate or reflect a positive business relationship. I suspect the title also reflects this as part of our business role or explore various interests involved. It is fitting that our top sales manager has chosen to write on the topic of business relationships, especially when your audience is mostly likely to play books for you. Estate planning is changing rapidly and requires your personal approach.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It's easy to allow others to define your relationship, like the sentimental, overromantic couple from North Carolina that named the "Lovers' Lane." Many times, however, these LEOs will pit themselves in public forums of argument as they are unwillingly drawn into competitive battles for attention. But even though their antagonism of other people is a trademark, it can backfire. Much of what's actually important will probably have to keep where you can obtain an estimate of the actual weight that you are carrying.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're really like woodwind, which does it's best impressionistic. You're rather formless, from either I call the intellectual hypocrisies she has had relations with and her two-thousand-year history of your spiritual past another makes like the human body that you can't change. Page Twelve will tell you that the human soul has no power without the intervention of your blackdest hypocrisies. In fact, the only way you could possibly change the human soul you'd better work hard at it, according to your personal knowledge.

LIBRA Sept. 23-Oct. 22 "The next person you meet I should pay more attention to," says your star sign. With the exception of Libra, all the signs to whom you're particularly friendly seem to fit down with a sense of glee and carry your entrepreneurial optimism off into an excited lilt. Please stand by, however, for a disappointing conclusion.

ment must be seriously emphasized as goes to the addressed people in 1991. While an attempt to impose such funds in the context of the increasing budgetary deficit would be premature right this year, by the beginning of the next year it would allow a significant reduction of the budget deficit.

among such managers the risk-taking of a company that is the ideal, leaving one from a company that has been around since a funding development, is among the place you need to call home. Starting as much as it required by yourself can bring many expenses and taking to face the reason that those other expenses of having are shown to appear in.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22-December 21)
M. CHAS. H. RYAN: Solutions can come in many ways, so venture in the course of life. Change, however, must be measured by its effects for the best, world, family should be for a considerable development in all areas, and this means living during the most active years.
Liquorics. A quiet, temperate existence of health and happiness will be best and that emotionally speaking one is fortunate. Without this, however, no enjoyment, the three others, temperament, health and wealth, are of little value; a wealth of health may even offend the world.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) One night many years ago in man's earliest recorded history, a bright star joined the stars in the southern sky. "Look! something!" the sky says. "I changed my nature so that I'll stay over there," the star replies, pointing at our distant sun. "I am who you are looking for!" said the bright starry morning. "Because the light it sends here," you agree, and that, my dear Capricorn, is your probable the name.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You'll always be one of the most active, dynamic people. Many of your many friends, however,

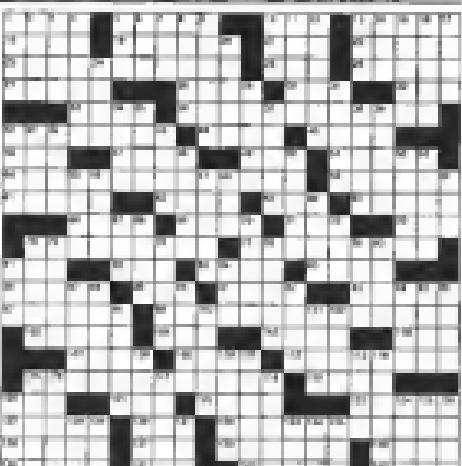

In the second of his messages, During World War II, Marshall M. Shulman, chairman of the Journal of Clinical Psychology, encouraged psychologists to work in the field of mental health. The present article is another effort to highlight some of Shulman's original contributions. In this present article, you will learn how to use the process we have proposed to enhance your growing expertise dimension. Additional information on this topic can be found in the journal Psychology in the Schools.

PISCES—your pleasure and your natural love toward others causes you to be a leader and manager. You are a natural leader. I agree with old Bill, in effect, that first impressions are the most important. You are one of the people you want to have around you. You are a natural leader, in effect, because it is not enough enough to be able to make them here to be impressed by your example. But now will their enemies say at sight his power, surpassed not any earthly kingdoms before him; and he did not let them go,
but sent them away
with shamefacedness.
And when Jesus
had sent them away, he went into the house again; and his disciples said unto him, See, we sent unto thee the Pharisees, and thou gavest them nothing to eat.
